What makes your business special?

We help children communicate in the ways that work best for them. Communication isn't just a skill. It's how a child connects, learns, advocates, and feels understood... every child deserves that.

Tiny Triumphs was created because Maggie and Gregory saw a gap in Maine families' care: children were waiting too long, receiving generalized therapy, or being handed AAC [Augmentative and Alternative Communication] systems without follow-through. For Gregory, this mission is personal. Growing up with a brother with Down Syndrome shaped his belief that early, specialized communication support can change the trajectory of a child's life—and their family. This belief is the heart of all that we do.

Something people don't realize about your business/services?

It's not just about pronunciation or "talking clearly." Pediatric speech therapy supports early brain development, behavior, emotional regulation, and more. Difficulties with speech or language can affect a child's ability to follow directions, express needs, and connect with others. Early support can prevent small delays from turning into long-term challenges.

When a child has speech or language delays, speech therapy is foundational to a child's overall development and future success.

Best thing you sell/serve/do?

We specialize in AAC, especially high-tech communication devices for children who are unable to speak. Our clinicians are among the most experienced AAC providers in the state, and we're trusted across Southern Maine. With seven active school district contracts and growing clinics, we've become a "first call" provider for AAC evaluations and therapy in this region.

Inclusion is central to everything we do. We want every child to be seen, understood, and able to participate fully—in their home, their classroom, and their community. That means collaborating closely with schools, building communication systems that travel with your child across settings, and advocating for supports that help them belong and thrive.

Most of all, we want this journey to feel supported and hopeful for your whole family. We celebrate meaningful progress and stay alongside you through every stage—because communication is a shared win, and no family should have to figure it out on their own.
